

Dr. Yvonne Satterwhite is an orthopedic surgeon with Resurgens Orthopaedics in Johns Creek. She specializes in sports medicine. She completed her undergraduate training at the University of Georgia, and her medical school and orthopedic residency at Tulane University. She completed a sports medicine fellowship with Dr. James Andrews in Birmingham, Alabama. Past honors include being named the Georgia Team Physician of the Year, and being voted an Atlanta Magazine Top Doctor for the past six years, including 2016. She served as head team physician for the first Atlanta Beat professional women soccer team, and was a team physician with the United States Olympic Committee which culminated with the 1998 Winter Olympics in Japan. She is currently the head team physician for three local high schools. She enjoys playing golf, traveling, and spending time with her husband Wayne and 14 year old twins Christopher and Nicole.

